The job of building a community through the program of the Chamber of Commerce is carried by a large number of men who give their time and effort toward making Richmond a better place in which to live and do business. Those who have assumed this task for the period of 1936 have just been named, and they have pledged themselves to an even more aggressive program than in past years. West of the state of the state

The Chamber of Commerce believes the membership and the public should be better acquainted with the officers, directors and committee members, and herewith presents the full list of names

PNEUMONIA

Ouring the winter months, pneumonia takes its annual toll in thousands of lives. Very often those who prove most susceptible to this disease are the very ones who least suspect themselves of being in any danger of an attack. It appears that the thin patient recovers more readily than the patient who is over-weight.

The best way to avoid pneumonia is to keep the resistance as high as possible through eating correctly, obtaining out-door exercise, breathing fresh air, and avoiding fatigue. The germ of pneumonia is often present in the mouths and throats of most city-dwellers during the winter months, and does no harm as long as the resistance is good.

cise, breathing fresh air, and avoiding fatigue. The germ of pneumonia is often present in the mouths and throats of most city-dwellers during the winter months, and does no harm as long as the resistance is good.

The prevalence of pneumonia at this particular time of year can only be explained by the way that the average person lives—he is cooped up in over-heated rooms, eats too many rich foods and to few vital vegetables, neglects to insure a regular intestinal elimination, gets very little sunshine, smothers the pores of the skin with heavy clothing, and omits regular exercise. This means that a toxic condition of the body is built up, and once this toxic condition is present, a sudden chilling of the body or exposure to wet, may result in an attack of memoria.

Pneumonia begins, suddenly with a severe chill and the intense chill is followed by fever, with headache. A sharp pain may develon in the chest on the affected side and much distress is caused by a quick, painful cough. Within 48 hours, the cough brings up a "rusty blood-stained sputum which is characteristic. Within 7 to 9 days, crisis occurs and the temperature returns to normal. Lobar pneumonia is the type most feared and in this disease there occurs an inflammation of one of the lobes of the lung. Bronche-pneumonia refers to at inflammation of one of the bronchi and lungs, the disease beginning in the bronchial tubes and then spreading to the lungs.

The treatment used during an attack of lobar pneumonia it ilrected toward aiding the forces fighting for recovery and towarinaking the patient as comfortable as possible during the attack. I severy case where the patient has developed pneumonia, I advise that a be given the advantage of diathermy treatment.

This is an electrical treatment which can be given in the home by a doctor using a portable apparatus. Pads are placed on the front and back of the affected area and an electric current then turne on up to a certain strength, the tissues deep inside the lung thereby being heated several degrees

(Gall Stones)

Question: Mrs. Kate R. wants to know: "Is there any text I can give myself to find out if I have gall stones?"

Answer: It is impossible for the layman to attempt to make a diagnosis or gall stones and even the expert diagnosticism may make a mistake. The most notitive way to ascertain that gall stones are present is to have an X-ray picture nucle which will usually disclose those that have forme! However, the in their varying composition, gall stones do not always show on the X-rays and therefore, they may be present without making an X-ray record of that fact.

Will HAYS and Judge Landis, czars, respectively, of motion pictures and baseball, are now joined by a new czar, Edgar Gorrell, who was elected head of the recently-formed Air Transport Association includes in its membership every scheduled airline in the United States, and its functions will resemble those of the North Atlantic Steamship Conference, which works in the manner of a Chamber of Commerce.

Colonel Gorrell, forty-six and boyish-looking, has been a pilot for twenty years. He is a West Point man, having been graduated in 1916. He became adjuttant of the First Aerial Squadron under General Pershing and saw service, in Mexico chasing Vills. During the World War he served first as Chief of Staff. To him are attributed many of the improvements developed in fighting machines at that time. He was the man who rejected or approved new type planes and engines. Following the war, Colonel Gorrell represented the United States in various capacities at the Peace Conferences.

When he returned to this country after his long war service he insigned from the Army and went into business. He soon joined the staff of the Statz Automobile Company and Liter was president of the firm for six years. He resigned from the Army and went into business. Engineers of the different airlines will exchange ideas and it is hoped in this way to prevent deterioration of Jonnes and engines. Air officials have found that heretofore the cost of replacement has been enormous, not because engines and planes wear and lakes wear and planes wear and lakes wear and planes and engines.

So much for the physical side, which at least stirs our sympathies and sustains our patience. Even more trying, though not so important, is the child who wiffully flouts his food, tossing his table belongings about, making playthings of both equipment and food, and occasionally indulging in real tantrums.

Much of this is a bid for attention or an attempt to see how he can contrive to get only the things he likes best to eat. If a household lacks discipline it is likely to show up at the table, and if the child is not in the habit of obeying it hat likely he will begin where his food is concerned.

So long as the youngster is well there is little likelihood he will be there is little likelihood he will be indured by occasionally doing with-out a meal. While he should not be hurried, there is no good reason, either, why he should be allowed to daily overlong. It goes without saying that proper and regular feeding of children calls for giving them a table to themselves. Especially is this true when there is company in the house. A timid child will often refuse to eat in the presence of strangers from sheer embar-

It is easy enough to prepare a small table at one side or to feed; the small children first. If in apprease, mechanical means must be contrived to act as appetizers, set the favorite doll or animal at a place, too. Having a tiny decorated alarm clock set at the time when the meal must be finished works for some cases.

At the same time it must have given her satisfaction, or else she would not have bothered carrying her disrespect to such an extreme. She is bound to try it again. Indeed, children frequently get the habit of singing or laughing or otherwise pretending indifference because it gives them a sense of power in a to them, difficult situ-ation. MODERN WOMEN

A Girl Who Complains That Men Fall for the "Wild" Type Too Easily

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

S IT really true that men discriminate against the conservative girl and fall hard and often for the more unconventional of the species? Such a charge is not uncommon; in fact, it is so general that, in justice to all, I wish men would take up the cudgels in their own defense. But the charge merely amuses them, unfortunately, and

Men are attracted, as a general thing, to girls who are good com-pany, lively girls who contribute Here are the events leading up to the tragedy. Mother discovered that Lillian, having washed her hands incompletely, had wiped them dry on a clean bath towel. She brought out the towel, with the telitale black hands imprinted on it, and proceeded to scale Lile on the and proceeded to scale Lile.

A girl, who for some reason or another, finds herself outdistanced by other girls, is bound to excuse herself by finding some reason for condemning the girls who have beaten her. My guess is that the young woman who admits being bewildered by men's preferences is being neglected by them, not because of her virtues, but because she is too self-conscious, or hasn't got what it takes to make them single her out among a horde of girls, who are perhaps more attractive in every way. And I don't mean less punctilious, either, but girls who are in way. And I don't mean less punc-tilious, either, but girls who are in the best sense of the word good sports, from which vantage point they easily step into the role of good companions and good wives

It's asking more than most of us could give to expect anyone to explain why they are attracted to one and not another—still, we might try for some enlightenment on the subject of what makes a girl a success with men.
